Congratulations on your commission and welcome to the Adjutant General Corp – "Defend and Serve". You have volunteered to lead Soldiers in an Army at war. I am proud of you for making that commitment and eager to help prepare you for such an awesome responsibility.

Our mission for Adjutant General BOLC B is two-fold. First, to train, educate, and (most importantly) inculcate you into our officer corps and reinforce your knowledge of the Army values to help you better understand the Army officer culture. Secondly, we have a responsibility to the Army to make you proficient in Human Resources. When you graduate, you will be competent, confident and adaptive and ready to lead Soldiers in your next unit of assignment.

Your pre-commissioning experience has exposed you to basic Soldier skills. At the Adjutant General BOLC B, we will reinforce some of those skills that we consider most critical in the first three weeks working towards building the Warrior Ethos (i.e., combatives, marksmanship, land navigation and physical fitness). Most importantly, we will transition you from a cadet or candidate into a Human Resources professional and a Leader. No longer merely in the receive mode as a student--you, lieutenants, will take an active role in your learning experience. At times, you will lead and instruct your classmates. Your developmental experience at Fort Jackson will be augmented with officers and non-commissioned officers excited to be a part of your training and who will coach, teach, and mentor you throughout this training. Upon completion of the first three weeks of basic skills training, you will transition into 9 weeks of Adjutant General core competency training. This training and education will focus on making you proficient as a Human Resources officers.

You will leave BOLC B with a stronger warrior ethos, job proficiency, and mentally and physically prepared to fight and win our nation's wars.

Again, congratulations. We look forward to your arrival.
